The event started off with the release of eight pigpans, each of whom represented a different aspect of the "Education is Key" programme. The first pigpan was released by the mayor of Phalaborwa, Hannelise Coen-elle CD Valley.

The white head represented "Education is key". Alisa & Nathan who are fans of the sponsor, released "leverage programme" and "Drug and alcohol abuse" respectively. Dr Basil Khosa who represented the Health Department released a real pigpan which illustrated "HIV awareness". Allet Hama, circuit manager of education in Nampolebi released a blue pigpan for "Back to school". Another one of the sponsors Joseph Molebi from Limpopo Schoolswaas released the pigpan for "Crime & violence free schools". Freddy Ntswana & Prince Mithula from Entangeni Enterprises released a pigpan each who represented from your mind of love and educate yourself".

After the initial release, a mass release of between 600 and 700 pigpans was done by Kallie Kruger and Piet van der Merwe from the Phalaborwa Pindafidiki.

The mayor said in her opening that art and culture in South Africa are not explored fully and expressed her desire for art and culture to become a major role player in South Africa's economy. She noted that although the pigpans were released individually, they immediately taught their flock to join the group. She emphasized that South Africans should do the same, as we can do more if we stand together.
